Religious leaders take stand against torture by CIA

Archbishop, bishops and clergy among those who call on Oregon’s senators to act on “clear moral issue”

A diverse and prominent group of Oregon’s religious leaders today announced their support for legislation to ban the use of torture by the CIA and all agencies of the U.S. government. The interfaith effort includes prominent religious leaders from the Christian, Jewish and Muslim faiths, and broad representation from all regions of Oregon.

Statewide faith leaders decided to act at this time because the U.S. Senate is considering an amendment to the Intelligence Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2008 that would apply the U.S. Army Field Manual standards for interrogation to all elements of the U.S. intelligence community, including the CIA and all their subcontractors. This would effectively close a loophole left by previous Congressional anti-torture legislation, which applied the Army Field Manual standard only to the Defense Department. Recent revelations that the CIA has destroyed video tapes made of interrogations it conducted have highlighted the need for further Congressional action on this issue.

As a first step in this campaign, dozens of Oregon’s faith leaders from the Christian, Jewish and Muslim faiths have signed a letter to U.S. Senator Gordon Smith urging him to support a uniform U.S. policy against torture under any circumstance, and by any agency of the U.S. Government, including the CIA.

“Senator Smith has previously supported applying these same restrictions on torture to the military, and we hope he will continue to exercise his strong, independent stand for human rights and against torture when the Senate considers applying these standards to the CIA,” said David Leslie, executive director of Ecumenical Ministries of Oregon. “Torture is universally seen as immoral in all the major faith traditions, and the United States needs to set a high moral standard for the world on this issue,” Leslie continued.

The Oregon Interfaith Letter Opposing Torture sent to Senator Smith includes the following statements:

Torture is universally condemned by people of faith and conscience as contrary to our most deeply held values. ... There are of course other, more pragmatic arguments against the use of torture. The most important of these, is that the United States must set a standard of international behavior regarding the use of torture. How can we complain when other nations use torture against our soldiers if we continue to practice torture ourselves?

Ultimately, we believe that this is a moral issue that cannot be compromised regardless of the weight of the pragmatic arguments. We support the Statement of Conscience issued by the National Religious Campaign Against Torture:

Torture violates the basic dignity of the human person that all religions, in their highest ideals, hold dear. It degrades everyone involved – policy-makers, perpetrators and victims. It contradicts our nation’s most cherished ideals. Any policies that permit torture and inhumane treatment are shocking and morally intolerable. Nothing less is at stake in the torture abuse crisis than the soul of our nation. What does it signify if torture is condemned in word but allowed in deed? Let America abolish torture now – without exceptions.
