

Levi D.

Youth Plaintiff, Juliana v. United States

Youth Plaintiff, Reynolds v. State of Florida

Youth Petitioner, Florida Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services Rulemaking Petition

Brief Biography

"You have to find the way of nature," is one of Levi's messages for the world from his beloved home of a barrier island in Florida, just 13ft above sea level. His island has been impacted by environmental issues from red algal blooms to increasing storms from climate change. He recently moved from the barrier island due to the risk of flooding caused by the climate crisis and now resides in mainland Florida.

After Hurricane Matthew, Levi volunteered replanting the dunes at the beach, where he also does litter clean-ups. The youngest #youthvgov plaintiff, Levi has been speaking at marches and rallies in his neighborhood to bring attention to the risk climate change poses to low-lying Florida. In his free time, Levi loves to sail, spend time training his dog, and volunteering at the local zoo. He is part of the lawsuit to imagine and build a better future.

"I work hard to protect the environment and animals near my home. I want my government to work hard to protect my future and the future of the animals and ecosystems in our country."
